Re: NGC17-134; NARA Appeal No. NGC17-028A

Dear Mr. Moore:

This is in response to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) appeal received in our office on January 23, 2017, in which you appeal the National Archives and Records Administration's (NARA) Office of General Counsel's (NGC) response to your initial FOIA request NGC17-134 (NARA-NGC-2017-000191). Your appeal was assigned tracking number NGC17-028A. I apologize for the delay in responding to your appeal.

Your initial FOIA request, dated January 4, 2017, was assigned tracking number NGC17-134. In your request you sought, "Letters from the USPS ordering people to fit for duty physical with wrong address (Gaslighting employees into psychosis)." You were informed on January 10, 2017, from NGC, that the records you seek are not in NARA's legal custody. You were also directed to contact the United States Postal Service (USPS) for the records you desire.

In your January 23, 2017 appeal, you appealed NARA's response that we have no records responsive to your request. You indicate that based on USPS regulation 100.700, "medical files from USPS employees are sent to the National Archives (The Employee Medical Folder is retained by USPS until the employee is separated from USPS. On an annual basis, records of all employees separated during the prior year are transferred to the National Personnel Records Center and retained for 30 years."

After review of your appeal, I determined that NGC's initial response was correct because, as indicated in the January 10, 2017 response, NARA does not have legal custody of the records you are requesting. Although the records you seek may be in the physical custody of NARA at its National Personnel Records Center (NPRC), the records are legally the property of the USPS and the USPS retains control over providing access to these records. Accordingly, your appeal is denied.
